Last-Minute Holiday Gift Guide For The Travel Savvy (PHOTOS)

Posted 12/20/11 8:00 AM ET

If your geek-chic sweetie has a sense of adventure on both sides of the camera, you might want to consider a few of these photo-driven finds and some of these tech sexy toys to kick start a very creative Christmas and "Happy Holidays" season.

Not to be outdone by their toys alone, the geek-chics are sure to step out in some serious style as well. So trust that this gear is as fierce, functional and fashionable as the gadgets they pair well with.

I think it's more than obvious... Game on!

The Tasting Room

21 of 22

This is the perfect gift for those that gallop the globe in search of the next great grape. The Tasting Room is a brilliant site for any and all eno enthusiasts as it celebrates blends, specific wineries and many a famous wine region, both globally and domestically.

Whether those on your list travel the world, wished they did or simply live to explore the celebrated vines, this is a great gift. The best part is that they sell perfectly packaged wine samplers, a lovely box of six, 50 ml bottles. If you or they ever wanted to play the vino field, consider A Taste Adventure - Tour of New Zealand ($28). Other tours are available in Italy and Spain. If you're looking for gifts specifically Made In The USA this season, as many are, explore the great domestic regions: A Tour of Santa Barbara, A Tour of Washington State and of course our very own iconic wine, Napa Reds 3 ($38).

If looking for a celebrity stamp in your tasting, bring in Batali as a personalized on-the-spot sommelier. Opt for the Mario Batali Selection - A Wine Lovers Road Trip, which brings it all full circle: the travel, the sport and the adventures all achieved through technical means at your very own virtual cellar. Now that's something to cheer about.

Now tip back, relax and enjoy those wines while you finish that list... Cheers!
